Celebrities Take a Swing at Ending Homelessness

Golf Tournament Benefits Two Charities

NBA All-star Otis Birdsong will hit the links at Trump International Golf Club on November 10th to help end homelessness in Palm Beach County. Birdsong will be joined on the greens by fellow NBA stars Kenny Anderson and Michael Ray Richardson for the charity tournament which also benefits the Sickle Cell Foundation.

Each year Trump International allows two Palm Beach County commissioners to donate the elite club and course for a charity tournament. Palm Beach County Mayor Priscilla Taylor selected the Homeless Coalition and Sickle Cell Foundation.

“While practicing their hobby and hanging out with their friends, the golfers will be making a difference in the lives of people who are experiencing homelessness,” said Homeless Coalition executive director Marilyn Munoz. “They are helping to provide homeless families and individuals with a safe place to call home.”

The Homeless Coalition plans to use funds from the tournament to provide immediate housing and meals, rental deposits, school supplies, job certifications and training for individuals and families who are experiencing homelessness.

“Take a Swing at Ending Homelessness” will include several games and competitions including a hole in one contest for a new Porsche Moran. The day will conclude with an awards reception and silent auction.

Please join us on Monday, November 10th at Trump International Golf Club. Registration begins at 10:30, with a shotgun start at noon.
